Bury Me Cold & More Last Words

The Crow Collections Book #4

by Jacob Steven Mohr

"Bury Me Cold is elegant, experimental, versatile, with an old school flair and grace, featuring stories that are unexpected and unconventional, inventive in its cosmic horror that manipulates space and time, presenting the realistic as the unfathomable and the unfathomable as realistic. Mohr writes with different faces and voices, with a hand that can easily switch cadence, pitch, and tone, bringing to the world stories that will keep readers up at night, whisk them from their bed, guide them by the hand towards a seemingly unending trail, and they'd willingly follow." —Ai Jiang, Bram Stoker and Nebula award-winning author of Linghun

AUTHOR

Jacob Steven Mohr

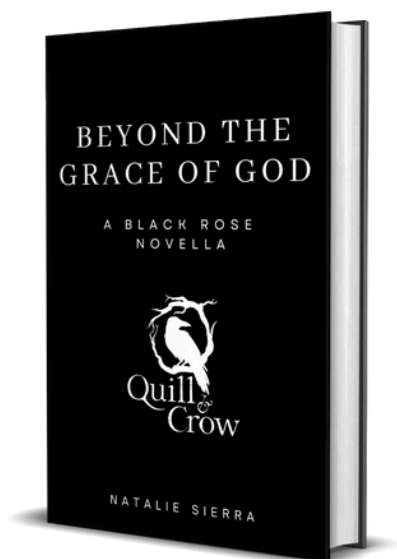

Jacob Steven Mohr does not believe in human consciousness; his works emerge as though from the ether, fully formed and fully ominous. Selections of these can be observed in Cosmic Horror Monthly, Shortwave Magazine, Chthonic Matter Quarterly, Weird Horror Magazine, and The Best Horror of the Year Vol. 15. He exists in Columbus OH. Follow him everywhere @jacobstevenmohr.

Description

An uncanny snowfall revives a cattleman's dead wife—with terrible secrets from beyond to spill like blood. A plague-like curse infects the memories of its victims, forcing them to go viral in increasingly grisly fashion. Twin sisters share a psychic link nothing can sever, not even the cold of the grave. Curiosity lures two stepbrothers into an imaginary haunted house—and the eager arms of its very real sole occupant.

Infatuations. Trespasses. Abominations. Resurrections. Jacob Steven Mohr's second volume of pitch-black fiction kicks over moss-covered rocks and shows us all the awful things that squirm beneath. In fourteen tales—including the titular "Bury Me Cold"—this collection is living, bleeding proof that when the lights go off, terror always gets the last word.

Raising Loki

by Elliot Manarin

The incredible true story of an unlikely friendship between an abused raven and a grieving human...

Memoir

Imprint: Quill & Crow

Pub Date: March 11, 2025

ISBN: 978-1-958228-48-7

Pages: 262

Formats: ebook, paperback, audiobook

AUTHOR

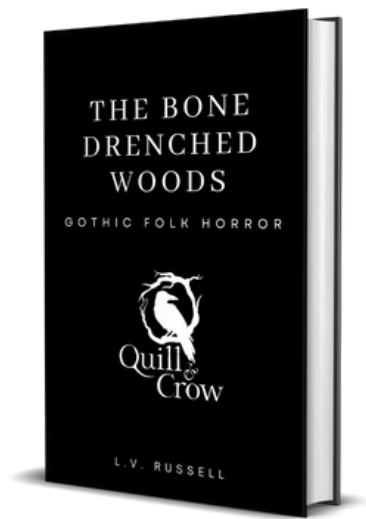

Elliot Manarin

Elliot Manarin is a filmmaker, producer, photographer, and screenwriter based in Essex, England. He is also a trained falconer who has worked with raptors at the award-winning Coda Falconry since 2013. In 2021, he received a National Diploma in Zoology, and he is an expert on one special raven: Loki. This is his first book.

Description

In 2014, an abandoned raven in need of rehoming came to the Coda Falconry, where Elliot Manarin worked. Little did Elliot know at the time, but the “cheeky corvid,” soon to be known as Loki, would end up putting him in hospital over a dozen times from vicious attacks. But Elliot refused to give up on him. Through trial and error, he earned Loki’s trust, creating a bond unlike any other. Their friendship only grew through the trials and tribulations to come, and soon, the mischievous Loki transformed from an abused raven, terrified of humans, into a true celebrity. With thousands of social media followers and people from all over the world traveling to meet him, Loki loves to entertain. But beyond his popularity, he has shown Elliot and the world that ravens are not only intelligent but empathetic and loving, capable of joy, remorse, and even forgiveness.

The Bone Drenched Woods

by L.V. Russell

*Carve the bones.
One for the gate,
one for the door,
two for the mantel,
and three for the floor...*

Gothic Folk Horror

Imprint: Quill & Crow

Pub Date: April 14, 2025

ISBN: 978-1-958228-82-1

Pages: 300

Formats: ebook, paperback, audiobook

AUTHOR

L.V. Russell

Lydia Russell grew up in a haunted cottage deep in the Dorset countryside alongside her three elder brothers, using the fields and woodland as their playground. As an adult with two young children, she has used the memories of the wild woods of her youth to write stories about faeries and ghosts and the old whispering oaks. When she is not writing, she is most likely to be found exploring the woods near her home, or curled up by candlelight with a good book.

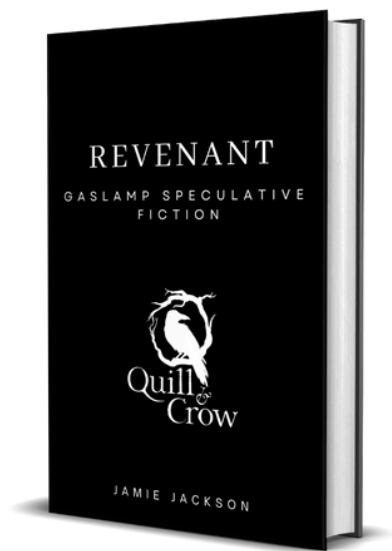

Description

Hyacinth Turning knows the terrors beyond her village, the insatiable hunger of the Teeth. She listens to the sermons given by the Elders in their hare-skin masks. She watches as the heathens hang and the witches burn. They tell her to be good and quiet. But Hyacinth is neither good nor quiet.

After a series of tragic events, Hyacinth finds herself hastily wedded and sent far away from all she has ever known to a settlement at the edge of the sea. Where more than just the Teeth are hungry. Another horror swims below, leviathan shadows kept at bay by offerings of flesh and bone.

But no sooner does Hyacinth take root in her new home do the Teeth and the Deep come to feed. Suspicion soon falls upon the outspoken Hyacinth, who spends more time with the outcasted Morgan Carroway than her own husband. The Elders want her burned, her husband wants her hanged, and a long-lost love claws at her dreams, but Hyacinth only wants one thing. A life and death of her choosing.

Imprint: Quill & Crow

Pub Date: May 16, 2025

ISBN: 978-1-958228-84-5

Pages: 282

Formats: ebook, paperback, audiobook

AUTHOR

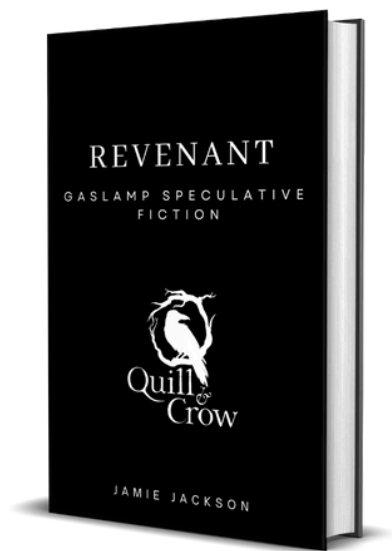

Jamie Jackson

Jamie writes books with words in them. She lives in Charlotte, NC, with her book boyfriend of a husband, three feral children, three badly behaved dogs, and two rescue fish. She survives exclusively on coffee and slinging words onto paper while working a full-time job that has nothing to do with the arts and way too much to do with talking to people. She also staunchly refuses to relinquish the title of “geriatric millennial” for “elder millennial.”

Description

When Vivian and Victor Tailor, a pair of psychic siblings, are assigned a seven-year-old cold case of a missing woman, what should have been a routine investigation quickly becomes anything but. They find themselves guests of a mysterious lord who inhabits a dark, foreboding manor full of mirrors. He takes a special interest in Vivian, and soon, she begins to experience night terrors that she suspects are more than just dreams. A string of suspicious deaths and missing persons soon follow, and it's up to the Tailors to determine if these cases are related and, if so, who is behind them...all while Vivian tries to navigate her conflicting feelings about the enigmatic noble watching her every move.

AUTHOR

Sabrina Voerman

Sabrina Voerman is a West Coaster with a penchant for visiting the numerous cemeteries across Vancouver Island. With a profound love of fairy tales and all things witchy, she draws her inspiration from the nature around her, allowing it to bleed into her storytelling. She is always seeking new adventures and places to explore, either in life or in her writing. When she isn't traversing all Vancouver Island has to offer, she can be found with a cup of coffee either reading a book or writing one.

Blood Queen: The Blood Bound Series

by Sabrina Voerman

Weaving the real world with fantasy, The Blood Bound Series features four books inspired by history and brimming with magic. Witches, werewolves, vampires, and sirens are at the helm of the series, featuring an overarching story that expands over centuries. Packed with feminist themes and macabre storytelling, small connections between the first three books tie them together for the final book. The series features three books that stand alone and can be read in any order, each laying the groundwork for the finale.

Description

The Wolf of Sylvania is dead.

The Coven has lost a sister.

After the events of Blood Coven, Alina, Sorin, Tatiana, and Lilianna mourn over the loss of Red. Stranded in the outskirts of Sylvania, they have nowhere to go. Howls permeate the Mørke Forest as a pack closes in, taking back the land that was theirs before the Luca curse stole it from them. When a mysterious woman arrives, she promises them protection within a sisterhood.

The Coven is forced to decide if they should stay in Sylvania, where they will surely be tried and killed for their witchcraft, or journey to Osleka with Torenia Luca, Red's aunt, whom Sylvania still fears, eighty years after her heinous crimes. As each witch decides her fate, whispers of war begin to grow into a chant: "Down with the Blood Queen."

Pub Date: July 8, 2025

ISBN: forthcoming

Pages: 220

Formats: ebook, paperback

AUTHOR

Brad Acevedo

Brad Acevedo writes under the behest of a mysterious presence that compels him to craft written nightmares. When not under their influence, he can be found in the sun dappled dregs of Gulf Coast Florida, valiantly (futilely?) attempting to shield his wife from the shadows. He can often be found terrorizing the Florida theme parks and skulking around in the underbrush. Maybe if he keeps writing, he can keep the shadows at bay... Maybe...

Description

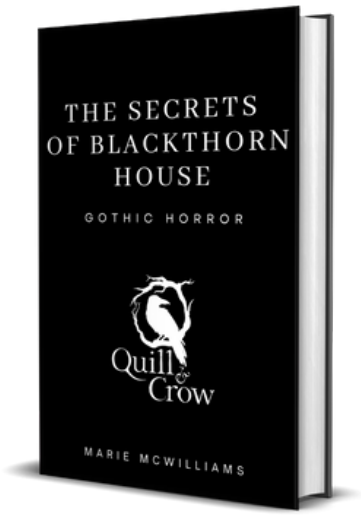

Deep down beyond the seam that splits the curtain between on and offstage, there exists a place called RoustTown. It's the kind of place where you can pull up a chair, get a hot meal, and listen to the local barkeep spin a few yarns about the town's unique history. The kind of place you can very easily get lost in.

And now presented for your curiosity are wonders to behold, stories passed down throughout RoustTown on the strange going-ons within these streets ruled by showmen and performers of forgotten ilk. Here, beyond the big top, they collect multiple tales of madness, murder, marvel, and mutation beyond the farthest stretches of the imagination, eager to impart their knowledge on passerby. Step right up, hand over your ticket, and listen well, for the show is ready to start.

Description

After a whirlwind romance, Evelyn Black is excited to start her new life with her husband, Peter, when his father's sudden passing gives him the title of Lord Black, along with the Black family's remote manor, Blackthorn House. Separated from her family and the life she has always known, Evelyn is thrust into a new life in the middle of the wild Yorkshire Moors. She quickly realizes something is very wrong with Blackthorn House. The sound of children's laughter can be heard throughout the halls, the constant fog surrounding the house is filled with wailing specters, and Evelyn's dreams are plagued with visions of a woman wearing her mother's broken corpse like a suit. Furthermore, her new husband has become a stranger to her, treating her with barely veiled disdain.

Unable to trust the rest of the staff, particularly the always-watching housekeeper Ms. Winters, and struggling to get answers from the frightened locals in the nearby village, Evelyn and her trusted servant Lilly must seek answers from the dead. They learn that the Black family has long kept a dark and terrible secret. A secret that threatens both of their lives and, now, the life of Evelyn's unborn baby. A secret involving a bargain paid in blood.

He received his MFA in fiction from Converse College, where he studied under Robert Olmstead, Marlin Barton, Leslie Pietrzyk, and Geoff Herbach. He grew up in Southern Appalachia, where his people settled before the Revolutionary War.

Description

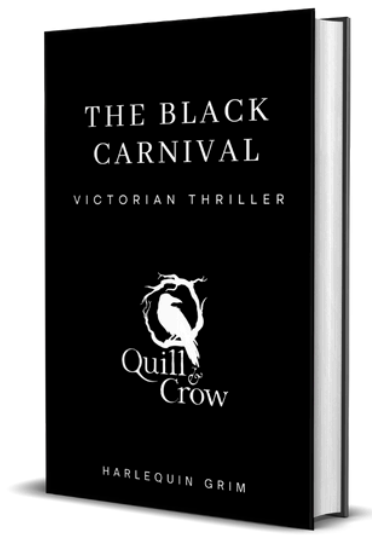

Sixteen-year-old Mina is frustrated by Daddy's drinking, her mom's fanatical religious beliefs, and growing up poor in the Southern Appalachian Mountains. Most of her teachers assume she won't amount to much despite her 4.0 GPA, and the country club guys think her easy prey. But they don't know Mina's dark secret: she can control a magical force of supernatural creatures known as the Shadow Faces.

Mina doesn't want powers. All she wants to do is escape the trailer park for a leafy college campus far away. But when her crush, Gabe, is stalked by a shapeshifting preacher/wolf, Mina learns to use her powers to protect him. Mina soon discovers the same preacher is trafficking teens for a mystical brothel and has kidnapped her best friend Erin after a failed attempt at conversion therapy. Can Mina use the Shadow Faces to save Erin and the other kids without losing her chance at a normal life?

AUTHOR

Harlequin Grim

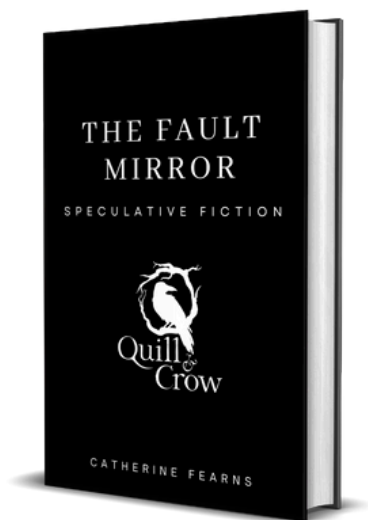

Mortuary worker turned full-time circus artist, Harlequin Grim leads a dual life as an entertainer and writer. He co-founded The Grim Theatre, a troupe dedicated to creating dark yet whimsical stories through literary, illustrative, and performing arts. This is his first novel.

Description

The year is 1886 in New Sarum, England, and Atherton Graves only knows a life surrounded by corpses. Amidst a rash of child deaths, he alone suspects they are the product of murder. At least, that's what the ghosts in his mortuary tell him. But there's hardly time to hunt the killer; Atherton has just sold a cadaver to a spiritualist at the notorious Black Carnival, and the town gang known as the Disciples are not going to take that lightly.

Caught between a serial killer, a circus bursting with foul characters, and his spiraling madness amongst the restless dead, Atherton will undoubtedly become the villain of his own story. The question remains: who, if any, will be unscathed by the rampant destruction he's invited?

AUTHOR

Logan Spurgeon

Logan Spurgeon is a speculative fiction author living in Lexington, Kentucky. After leaving a doomsday cult, he revived his dream of being a writer. When he's not crafting new stories, Logan loves spending time hiking, taking care of plants, cooking, making art, or having good conversations around the table. Besides Logan's debut horror novel, HINTERLAND, his gothic novel, THE HOUSE ON GARNET HILL, will be released by Quill & Crow in 2026. His novella, THE CASTLE ON THE INSIDE, is now available.

Description

Kestrel awakes in the woods without a real name or his memories. Before him are twelve strangers, an altar on fire, and bones hanging from the trees like wind chimes. He's to be initiated into their group so they may fulfill their purpose: head to the mountain of the so-called gods, have a feast, and bring about the end of the world. Kestrel is willing to risk it all to escape, but without any memories, he knows he must play along until he finds a way out.

It won't be easy. Winter is on their heels, hunters are searching for them, and the strange rituals they perform will rip his humanity from his flesh. But Kestrel isn't alone. One of the strangers claims to be his friend from before and there are others willing to join his side and leave the wilderness... if the gods let them.
